

RAPPORT

SANTÉ ET SÉCURITÉ DU TRAVAIL

Formulaire 2064 (2012-06)

Date de l'événement: 90-05-08

Date de l'examen: 92-12-10

BILAN DES SÉQUELLES

Code 102 383 2 %

Code 204 219 2°2 %

☒ Oui Atteinte permanente reconnue

Signé: Dr Pierre Bouchard, orthopédiste

NOTE DE CONSULTATION

Clinique du Nord

Date de la visite: 2023-08-03

SUBJECTIF

Douleur cervicale persistante, irradiation au membre supérieur droit.

RAPPORT D'IMAGERIE

Examen: IRM Rachis Cervical

Date de l'examen: 2023-08-01

CONCLUSION

Discopathie dégénérative C5-C6 avec sténose foraminale.

Signé: Dr Alain Roy, radiologiste

PLAN

Infiltration facettaire C5-C6.

Signé: Dre Claire Fontaine

CERTIFICAT MÉDICAL

Date de l'examen: 02-03-04

Diagnostic: Cervicalgie post-traumatique

Signé: Dre Claire Fontaine

RÉSULTAT DE LABORATOIRE

Hémogramme complet

Valeurs dans les limites de la normale.

There is a lot of information out there about the importance of having a good relationship with your doctor. It's not just about getting a diagnosis and a prescription. It's about having a doctor who listens to you, who understands your needs, and who works with you to develop a treatment plan that is right for you. A good doctor-patient relationship can make a big difference in how you feel about your health and how well you do with your treatment.

One of the most important things you can do to build a good relationship with your doctor is to be honest with them. Tell them about all the symptoms you're having, even if they seem small or silly. Don't be afraid to ask questions or to express your concerns. Your doctor is there to help you, and they need to know what you're going through in order to give you the best care possible.

Another important thing is to be involved in your own care. Don't just follow your doctor's orders blindly. Ask them to explain the reasoning behind their recommendations. If you don't understand something, ask for clarification. If you have a different idea about how to proceed, let your doctor know. You are the expert on your own body, and your doctor is the expert on medicine. Working together, you can make the best decisions for your health.

It's also important to have a good relationship with your doctor outside of the clinic. If you have any questions or concerns between visits, don't hesitate to call or email your doctor's office. A good doctor will be happy to help you with anything you need. And if you're having a hard time with your treatment, let your doctor know. They can help you adjust your plan or refer you to a specialist if needed.

Finally, remember that your doctor is a human being, too. They have their own lives and families, and they may not always have the time or energy to give you the attention you need. But that doesn't mean they don't care about you. Most doctors are very dedicated to their work and to their patients. They want to help you feel better and live a healthy life. So be patient and understanding, and they will do their best to take care of you.

Building a good relationship with your doctor takes time and effort, but it's worth it. A good doctor-patient relationship can make a big difference in your health and your life. So take the time to build a strong relationship with your doctor, and you'll be on your way to feeling better and living healthier.